Motivating Hard to Reach, Uninterested and Disruptive Students

If you've ever struggled with disinterested, unmotivated students, you know how emotionally draining it can be. What was once expected behavior--paying attention, completing assignments, being respectful--seems to have fallen by the wayside. Today's kids expect to be entertained in the classroom, and given easy grades for merely paying attention to you.

How do you fundamentally change the way students think about their responsibilities in the learning process? How do you get them interested and fired up about learning? At this breakthrough workshop, you'll learn sure-fire motivational techniques that will pay off for years to come--for both you and your students.
